Abram Shanedling is an associate in the Business Trial Practice Group in the firm's Washington, D.C. office and a member of the firm's Communications Team.

Areas of Practice

Abram focuses his practice on business litigation and technical regulatory compliance matters. He represents clients before federal and state trial and appellate courts across the country as well as federal and state administrative agencies in complex and high stakes matters ranging from commercial disputes and products liability litigation to controversies involving statutory, constitutional, communications, environmental, privacy, and administrative law issues.

Abram regularly represents cable operators and other broadband providers in a wide range of regulatory, litigation, and transactional matters. These include disputes related to local franchising, rights-of-way, PEG programming, pole attachments and infrastructure deployment and a host of other related issues. He regularly represents providers on these issues in state and federal courts and participates in rulemakings and adjudications before the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) and state public service commissions.

In addition to his practice, Abram is actively involved in the firm, currently serving on Sheppard Mullin's Pro Bono Committee, Recruiting Committee, and Associates' Forum. Abram is dedicated to pro bono representation and public interest litigation in Washington, D.C. and across the country. Abram has represented several clients in immigration and asylum matters, successfully aided a federal inmate in securing compassionate release, and is currently representing a not-for-profit organization in environmental litigation arising under the Clean Water Act concerning the Bristol Bay region of Southwest Alaska.

Abram previously served as a law clerk for the U.S. Senate Committee on the Judiciary and as a legal intern in the Office of the Chief Counsel of the U.S. Department of Homeland Security.

Aside from his practice, he is an Adjunct Professor at Georgetown University Law Center, where he teaches a course on Legal Research, Analysis and Writing.
