

The 2010 UK Bribery Act (FCPA On Steroids) V. The Reinvigorated FCPA -- Who Has the Bigger Stick!

Sheppard Mullin, Trust Strategy Group and Charles River Associates Present:

The 2010 UK Bribery Act (FCPA On Steroids) V. The Reinvigorated FCPA -- Who Has the Bigger Stick!

After thirty years of arguably lackluster application of the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act (FCPA), the U.S. Department of Justice has now escalated its position on corruption and bribery in international business and re-defined it as a "national security issue."

Analogously, in keeping with the obligations of the Organization for Economic Co-Operation and Development (OECD) Anti-Bribery Convention, its various signatories have passed FCPA-type laws to try to fight these problems world-wide. Remarkably, the United Kingdom, has taken an even harder line on these forms of corruption -- the 2010 UK Bribery Act.

As a result of this new focus and realignment of investigative and prosecutorial resources around the globe, criminal prosecutions and civil actions, against both companies and individuals, are on the rise.

THE KEY QUESTION: How do you as a company or you as a corporate officer stay compliant with applicable laws in your international operations?
