Greg Grigorian is a partner in the Finance and Bankruptcy, Real Estate and Corporate Practice Groups in the firm's Washington, D.C. and New York offices.

Areas of Practice

Greg's practice focuses on real estate and real estate finance, corporate finance and renewable energy transactions on behalf of clients such as private equity firms, banks, developers, corporations and other investors. He represents a variety of clients in real estate debt and equity transactions, mezzanine and subordinated debt financings, corporate loans, asset-based financings and other complex debt and equity arrangements. He regularly works with clients on the securitization of numerous asset classes, ranging from residential and commercial mortgages to more unusual assets such as church loans, whole-business loans and cell phone tower leases.

In addition, Greg advises clients with respect to real estate matters related to investments in renewable energy projects such as wind farms and geothermal plants.
