About:

This is a unique simulation-style programme where individuals will have a chance to work through how to handle a data breach, from identification, investigation, notification, to regulatory and litigation fall out. Taught by the author of a treatise on the subject, who has handled hundreds of multinational breaches for companies around the globe, we will focus on how companies can handle the myriad -and sometimes-competing legal obligations that arise under GDPR, U.S. and Canadian laws, to name but a few.

What you will take away:

- How to mitigate future risk when investigating a data incident
- How to determine whether an incident gives rise to a duty to notify
- How to notify and handle post-notification inquiries
