Regulators across the country are increasingly focused on per- and polyfluoroalkyl substances (PFAS) in soil and water. These “forever chemicals” are persistent and widespread, and pose complex cleanup challenges. As federal standards for PFAS near adoption, now is the time for businesses and real property owners to assess potential liabilities and take steps to minimize risk. Join Sheppard Mullin and SLR for a discussion of:

- current and pending PFAS regulations;
- evolving PFAS diligence requirements; and
- critical steps to avoid or mitigate PFAS enforcement and/or remediation actions.
