2010 has brought numerous developments in labor and employment involving legislation, enforcement activity, and court decisions. Please join our experienced attorneys for an informative and lively discussion regarding recent activity in the following areas:

- The new definition of "employer" under California law and what that means for your company
- May employers monitor employees' email traffic from company computers and cell phones after the Supreme Court's recent decision?
- Avoiding discrimination allegations without creating reverse discrimination liability after Dukes v. Wal-Mart
- Drafting medical questionnaires that comply with the ADA
- Navigating Obama's new healthcare laws
- Employee or Intern? – New state and federal guidance regarding internship classifications
- Protecting wage/hour audits under the attorney client privilege doctrine
- Are you potentially liable as a joint employer? New guidance from the California Supreme Court
- Updated child labor regulations from the DOL

- Do I need to pay my employees for donning and doffing?
- The latest on Brinker and state class certification trends

And many more cutting-edge developments in labor and employment law....
