Presented by Samantha Hardy & David Chidlaw

2013 has ushered in significant developments in labor and employment law of which employers should be aware. At our upcoming seminars, Sheppard Mullin labor and employment attorneys will discuss these important new cases and answer your questions. We will explain how these developments will affect the day-to-day decisions made by business owners, in-house counsel, and human resource professionals. We will also address the current trends in employment litigation and class actions, and discuss how employers can manage risk in the most effective way possible. Please join our experienced attorneys for an informative and lively discussion regarding recent activity in the following areas:

Wage and Hour Developments

- Exempt classifications and the salary basis test
- New concepts about what constitutes compensable time
- Recent meal/rest period decisions
- Employee tip pooling claims
- Vacation pay claims
- Employee vs. Independent Contractor

- PAGA claims on the rise

Discrimination and Harassment

- Recent case law on discrimination and harassment
- The EEOC's revised publications on disability discrimination prevention
- The interplay between protected disability leaves

Plus Updates On:

- The validity of arbitration agreements and class action waivers
- The Supreme Court's recent decisions on retaliation and the definition of "supervisor"
- Workplace issues due to the Supreme Court's recent ruling on the Defense of Marriage Act
- Social media policies and issues
- The NLRB's new posting rules
- Affordable Care Act

This will be an informative and interactive presentation that no employer should miss!
